The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, SEPTEMBER 28, 1867.

SOME criticism which appeared the other day in our commercial article on certain trade practices lately introduced into Hongkong, have excited the indignation of one firm, which fits the cap on its own head in a letter we publish to-day, and also elicited a remonstrance on high moral grounds from an apparently impartial writer who sympathises, on free trade and fair play principles, with the practices censured. As this correspondent observes, "a nice moral problem" arises out of the practices, or, rather, various moral problems are involved therein. As for the morality of hypothecating bills of lading, that is a question apart altogether from the question how far a man is justified in disregarding the interests of his neighbours for his own good. There is no doubt that the Manchester trade would scarcely be what it is if it were not that the practice of hypothecation has been resorted to on an enormous scale to push the sale of piece goods all over the world. The disclosures in connection with the LYALL-STILL bankruptcy showed this amongst other things, and it must be freely admitted that business conducted on that principle is largely tinctured by the gambling element. Nevertheless, if it be a good thing that trade should be enlarged, and interchange of commodities promoted, there is a good result for the world in the midst of certain evils arising out of the accommodating readiness of banks to advance money on collateral security, and enable men to trade who never traded before, and men who traded before to do so the more. Unfortunately for the arguments which there may be in favor of greasing the wheels of business with "banking facilities," China is just now suffering dreadfully from their bad effects. If it had not been for banking facilities, the trade would never have been puffed up to unsafe proportions, to collapse afterwards as we have seen,—substantial houses with a solid foundation of capital to work with would never have been undermined and finally brought to ruin and annihilation by the unhealthy competition of men of straw inspired with banking facilities, who, for the sake of running a short career of hollow prosperity, played at dice, so to speak, with their neighbours' accumulated good fortune. It is no doubt true that if it had not been for the ingenious contrivance in finance which have in modern years rendered capital to a great extent a superfluity in mercantile life, that a good many houses in China now going on successfully enough, would never have come into existence, but it can hardly be denied, on the other hand, that men with capital have sometimes had to suffer vicariously for the sins of their neighbours.

For the moment, however, we think that the morality of indulging in banking facilities is hardly the main problem involved in the censure cast upon the practices described in our commercial article, defended by MACGREGOR and Co., and palliated by our correspondent CONSONANS. The immediate question is this—is a man justified morally in earning, say a shilling, for himself by an act which deprives his neighbours of a sovereign say, all round? Of course, competition is based upon the theory that each man is fully justified in sacrificing his neighbours' interest where it directly clashes with his own, but although it may be very difficult to draw the line absolutely, we are strongly disposed to think that there is a limit beyond which no one is morally entitled to do this. That is to say, to apply the abstract principle to commerce plainly, that when a merchant finds he is not competing with his rivals on equal terms, but doing that which is ruinous to them for the sake of a small reward to himself, he would, if he were a high-minded man, prefer to abandon the small reward for himself. To express the same idea metaphorically, one is not entitled to burn one's neighbour's house, in order to boil one's own eggs. In the early days of the China trade foreign merchants appear to have hung together very much to their mutual advantage, but at that time the great discovery of a way to do business without capital had not penetrated to the Far East. By the time it was thoroughly comprehended here, and a new race of merchants had arisen to put it in practice, the old brotherly feeling utterly disappeared, and now a readiness to cut one another's throats is exhibited by foreigners generally, and the only people who gain thereby are the Chinese merchants, into whose hands must have flowed a great deal of that profit which used to be made on British goods sold in China. The reckless undersellers have taken that which not enricheth them, but leaves the steady-going old traders comparatively poor indeed, and it is not to be wondered at that a very bitter feeling is excited against them. Meanwhile, the same reckless and disastrous system of doing business is carried on here in reference to China exports, and by proceedings precisely analagous to that of men who try to get a little business for themselves at a starvation profit by "breaking down the market" in cotton goods, the tea trade has been destroyed. "Banking facilities" came into play here as well as at the other end, and the new class of merchants without capital, rushed into the export trade, taking for their motto, "every man for himself, and the Devil take the hindmost." Higher and higher rose the demands of the native dealers, lower and lower sank the margin of profit, until business resolved itself into betting, with the odds half-a-dozen to one against the players. Substantial merchants, partly infected, it may be supposed, with the prevalent insanity, and partly in pursuance of the policy of keeping in the market, bought with hard money while the reckless innovators were buying with empty and worthless credit, and came out of the struggle ruined men, while the others, those who had merely been doing the best for themselves, as they might have urged, in accepting a lower than the prevailing rate of profit, came out bankrupt simply, whitewashed of the obligations so recklessly contracted, and no worse off than when they began.

It does not always follow, to sum up these reflections, that because you have a right to do a thing, it is right to do it. Anyone who can without violating any law of the land sell Manchester goods here to Chinese buyers at a rate which gives a bare margin of profit, just enough to pay for his current subsistence, has a right to do it and enjoy his small success as best be can, but if he finds himself called hard names by the people who are seriously injured by the policy he adopts, and who lose by it far more than he can ever hope to gain, that is probably the least mischief to himself that he can expect. No doubt competition in all branches of commercial life just now amongst foreigners in China, is very severe and venomous, so much so that a great deal probably which cannot be approved of might be passed over without censure unless attention is specially called to it; but when this happens, and a particular instance of venomous competition comes to the surface of things and is talked about, there is nothing left but to declare it, without reference to how many more instances might be quoted, the bad thing it is, mischievous, and, so far, morally wrong.

Early in August last information was received at the Central Police Station that a small junk had been attacked and robbed by pirates in the Ly-ee-moon Pass, and that the piratical craft was lying in this harbour. This turned out to be correct, for Inspector Daly soon discovered the pirate boat lying over on the Kowloon side, but she was then deserted and there was nothing left on board to indicate her character. A few boarding pikes, spears, and shields were found, but no more than may be seen on board any fishing junk sailing out of Hongkong. This boat was taken possession of by Mr. Daly as a stand-by in case anything further should turn up, but she unfortunately foundered during the late typhoon. Something did turn up soon, in the shape of a man who knew all about the piracy; knew the men who committed it; was acquainted with all their haunts, and could point out the persons in Hongkong with whom they were connected. His own neck was not quite safe, so to secure it, he was willing to tell all he knew and make a clean breast of it. This individual, however, might have proved a slippery customer after all, so to make sure of him, he was also taken possession of by the police and placed in the Central Station, where it was supposed he would have been safe until something further could be done. This step, however, turned out unfortunate; either the man was doubtful about his own safety, or for some other reason he repented the step he had taken, and the result was that either himself or his friends managed one night to tamper with the Chinese interpreter in the charge-room, and made it worth his while to let this unwilling informer go. Next morning the useful witness was found to be not on hand, and there being strong corroborative evidence against the interpreter, he was committed to gaol for six months' hard labour by Mr. Goodlake. On the 16th inst. that inveterate pirate hunter Inspector Daly, received information that the master of the pirate boat which he had picked up in the harbour, had arrived from Macao in company with another man. Following up his information the inspector traced these two men to a house at West Point, where he arrested them, and found the alleged master of the boat to be one Chow-choy-yee, an individual whom he had known as a pirate for the past eighteen months, but had never been able to find him or bring anything directly home to him. The other man was a well-known bad character at Macao, where he went by the name of A-sing, and was the constant associate of pirates and others. Now was the time when the man who had been allowed to escape from the charge-room might have been made available, but he was nowhere to be found, and no one could tell where the boat which was attacked had gone to. As a last resource, therefore, the two men were brought yesterday before the Hon. F. Forth, sitting magistrate, charged with being rogues and vagabonds, and as they were unable to show to the satisfaction of the bench their mode of earning an honest living, they were each required to enter into their own recognisance, in $300 and find two sureties in $250 each, to appear and answer any charge that may be made against them for the next three months.

Inquests are now held on the bodies of all prisoners who die in the gaol, for the purpose as the coroner explained, of setting the public generally, and the friends of the deceased, if they have any, know that they came fairly their death, and were well treated during sickness. One of these enquires was held yesterday on the body of a prisoner who had been sentenced to a month's hard labour for some trifling offence. The man was very ill when first admitted to the gaol, and was an inmate of the hospital until the 26th inst., when he expired. A verdict that death had resulted from natural causes was returned.

Yesterday, shortly after noon, the body of an emaciated-looking coolie was brought up to the Central Police Station still warm. It appeared that the unfortunate man had been noticed crawling along Queen's-road a few minutes before. Presently he sat himself down on the curbstone utterly exhausted, and attracted the attention of a European gentleman, who pointed him out to the Indian constable on the beat. He was at once put into a chair, and conveyed to the Central Station, but before he reached there life was extinct. The body was sent on to the Civil Hospital, where an inquest will be held to-day. It appears that in whatever part of the town an accident happens whereby any one is injured, the unfortunate man has to be dragged up to the Central Station to receive an order of admission before he is taken to the hospital. In many cases this must entail a great amount of extra suffering, besides in some instances where immediate surgical aid is required, jeopardising even life itself. Could not the home system of instant admission to all accidents or cases of need be adopted at the Government Civil Hospital? All cases of the kind eventually find their way to that excellent institution, and the increase of the case ought of itself to constitute a ticket of admission without reference to anyone else. Of course, a report of the circumstance could be afterwards made at the Central Station and the necessary steps taken by the police.

The Hongkong Amateur Theatrical Society.

A meeting of the members of the above society was held at the Club yesterday afternoon Mr. F. I. Hazeland in the chair

Mr. Starkey, Hon. Sec., in reviewing the financial position of the society, was happy to be able to state that the operations during the last season had been carried on with success, so that all expenses had been covered by the receipts and a valuable collection of "Properties" remained available for the use of the members.

With regard to the coming season, already before the subscription-lists were open names of subscribers had been received representing about $900 towards the expenses of the proposed performances during the winter. The officers of the garrison he believed would contribute a considerable re-inforcement of histrionic talent, and altogether the prospects of the Society were on a highly-satisfactory footing. The following gentlemen were then elected to serve as a committee, with power to add two military members to their number, viz., Dr. Dods, and Messrs. Coughtrie, Hazeland, and H. H. Nelson, (Honorary Secretary and Treasurer), and after a cordial vote of thanks to the retiring Secretary and a similar compliment to the Chairman, the meeting separated.

Mercantile Competition.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIR,—A nice moral problem is involved in the question whether such a policy in business as you describe in your commercial article of yesterday is justifiable, or, as you denounce it in what seems to me rather an unnecessarily emphatic manner, "despicable." I cannot make up my mind as to the difference which exists between the journeymen tailors on strike who bully other journeymen tailors not on strike, and consider them despicable fellows for making up a coat at a lower rate of pay than seems good to the majority, and the merchant, who bullies an outsider for trying to get possession of certain crumbs of business by underselling him. I am not in mercantile life myself, which perhaps explains the difficulty I have in realising the sinful nature of a transaction, which, though it puts money, some small amount at all events, into the pocket of the man who carries it out, and gives Chinamen their cotton yarn at lower rate, than they would otherwise have to pay, a good thing in its way surely, looking at the matter philosophically, is denounced as atrocious because it interferes with the profits of another man who wants to be paid at a higher rate for carrying out other transactions of a similar kind. I have been accustomed to hear the proceedings of Sheffield workmen who "ratten" their companions for prefering their own individual interest to that which is assumed to be the good of the Union, described as next door to criminal, at all events as disgraceful to their civilisation and intelligence. The freedom of every workman to whatever seems good to him (whenever it seems good to him to work at a low rate of wages for his masters) is declared to be a priceless privilege, which must on no account be taken from him by others for their good. Moreover, broad views of the greatest happiness of the number, point to the propriety of keeping guard over their individual freedom of workmen in order that open competition may bring down wages to their "natural" level and benefit the consuming class, whose interests are paramount by reason of their vast extent. Despite certain sympathies with workmen who want to get as much as they can in the shape of wages and are intelligibly indignant against those who upset their little plans for driving hard bargains with their masters, I have been driven to admit that Political economy was great, John Mill amongst others, its prophet, and rattening a weakness entirely indefensible, even worthy to be prevented by sharp punishments. Now, it seems to me that if your remarks at all fairly represent the mercantile view of this particular matter before us, that the Hongkong merchants want to "ratten" these poor outsiders, whoever they are, that you seem to have in your mind. Don't lend yourself to any such attempt. If great houses can't defend themselves by means of the superior advantages of their capital, why should not poorer men who are willing to do business for smaller rewards get their fair share of the crumbs?

Your truly,
CONSONANS.

September 27th, 1867.

Police Intelligence, September 27th.

BEFORE THE HON. F. FORTH.

But a very small number of cases appeared on the charge sheet to-day, and these of a very trivial and unimportant nature.

A colored man named Thompson, employed as watchman at the Gas Co.'s works, West Point, was charged with pilfering some tobacco from the Wing-cheong-loong shop, Queen's-road West.

It appeared by the evidence of complainant that while he was serving some customers, at about eight o'clock last night, the prisoner came into the shop, and without saying by your leave or anything else, seized on two and a half plugs of tobacco and made off with them; complainant followed and recovered his property, and sent a friend for a constable, on whose arrival he gave prisoner in charge.

Prisoner's own version of the story was of course quite different. He had gone into the shop for the purpose of purchasing some tobacco, but that which was shown him was too dry for his taste; there was also some difference of opinion as to what the price ought to be, which ended in complainant seizing him (prisoner) and abusing him in plain right down terms. Prisoner went to call a constable and gave complainant in charge, but the constable would have nothing to do with the matter, and told him he had better take the number of complainant's house and summons him. Complainant, however, made a charge against him and the constable arrested him.

The Indian constable who had shown such an uncommon amount of common sense, said that he would not arrest complainant because prisoner assigned no reason for giving him in charge, besides, he had a shop and could always be found. Prisoner had resisted him at first, and refused to accompany him to the station until advised to do so by a European, who said it would be worse for him if he did not.

This case occupied the attention of the court for a considerable time. There were no actual witnesses to the alleged robbery, and His Worship was hardly satisfied with either account of the transaction. It appeared, however, that prisoner had formerly been in the police force, from which he voluntarily resigned in 1861 with a good character, His Worship was therefore inclined to give him the benefit of the doubt and dismissed the case.

PETTY LARCENY.

A miserable, half-starved looking coolie was charged with stealing a jacket and pair of trousers, the property of Chun-a-sing, cook to some bricklayers employed on the City Hall. The clothes had been left hanging up to dry, when prisoner, who was passing by, seized them and ran away, but was pursued and caught.

The case was too plain for there to be any doubts at all about it, and His Worship sentenced the prisoner to two months' imprisonment with hard labour. The man was led from the dock cursing all hands in the Chinese vernacular, but His Worship did not hear this, or hearing, probably did not understand, and no one thought proper to apprise him of the immense contempt of court that was going on; probably they thought he consumed quite enough time over the cases unavoidably brought before him, without making any extra work for him to get through.

REMANDED CASES.

The two men charged on the 25th instant with stealing a silver watch from the shop of Mr. Hochstetter, watchmaker, Queen's-road, were brought forward again to-day, and fully committed for trial at the next Criminal Sessions of the Supreme Court.

BEFORE E. W. GOODLAKE, Esq.

The two men arrested in Yow-ma-tee on the 18th inst. under suspicious circumstances, having in their possession a loaded revolver, some ammunition, &c. &c., were again brought forward to-day. Nothing further, however, had been found out about them, although it was pretty well understood that they were more or less implicated in some piratical transactions; still nothing could be brought home to them. They were therefore committed for one month as rogues and vagabonds, and ordered to find substantial security for their appearance at any time for the nine months following.

Another suspicious character, who was sentenced as such to one month on 19th August last, for being found concealed in the Chinese Exhibition at West Point under circumstances of which he could give no reasonable and satisfactory account, was also sent up with a memo. from the Acting Superintendent of police, to the effect that the man was a bad character, dangerous to the peace of the colony, and, further, that he had been heard to make use of threatening language towards the watchman through whom he was arrested. Under these circumstances this man was likewise required to find security for his good behaviour for six months.

The Queen and Late Prince Consort.

We make some further extracts from the Times' review of the book about Prince Albert's early life:—

The last letter we shall quote is of very great interest. It is addressed to Baron Stockmar, one of the Prince's most trusted friends, and it describes his more serious reflections on his new position. It sketches the course of conduct which he thought he should adopt, and it forms a noble and fitting introduction to his future history:—

"Dear Baron Stockmar,—A thousand thousand thanks for your dear, kind letter. I thought you would surely take much interest in an event which is so important for me, and which you yourself prepared.

"Your prophecy is fulfilled. The event has come upon us by surprise, sooner than we could have expected; and I now doubly regret that I have lost the last summer, which I might have employed in many useful preparations, in reference to the wishes of relations, and to the opposition of those who influenced the disposal of my life.

"I have laid to heart your friendly and kind-hearted advice as to the true foundation on which my future happiness must rest, and it agrees entirely with the principles of action which I had already privately framed for myself. An individuality, a character, which shall win the respect, the love, and the confidence of the Queen and of the nation must be the groundwork of my position. This individuality gives security for the disposition which prompts the actions; and even should mistakes occur, they will be more easily pardoned on account of that personal character; while even the most noble and beautiful undertakings fail in procuring support to a man who is not capable of inspiring that confidence.

"If, therefore, I prove a 'noble' Prince in the true sense of the word, as you call upon me to be, wise and prudent conduct will become easier to me, and its results more rich in blessings.

"I will not let my courage fail. With firm resolution and true zeal on my part, I cannot fail to continue 'noble, manly, and princely' in all things. In what I may do good advice is the first thing necessary, and that you can give better than any one, if you can only make up your mind to sacrifice your time to me for the first year of my existence here.

"I have still much to say to you, but must conclude, as the courier cannot wait longer. I hope, however, to discuss the subject more fully with you by word of mouth at Wiesbaden. Hoping that I shall then find you well and hearty, I remain yours truly, "ALBERT."

The Queen, about to be married to the husband of her choice, appears full of hope and happiness. She describes her own feelings in the following letter to her uncle Leopold:—

"Windsor Castle, Oct. 15, 1839.

"My dearest Uncle,—This letter will, I am sure, give you pleasure, for you have always shown and taken so warm an interest in all that concerns me. My mind is quite made up, and I told Albert this morning of it. The warm affection he showed me on learning this gave me great pleasure. He seems perfection, and I think that I have the prospect of very great happiness before me. I love him more than I can say, and shall do everything in my power to render this sacrifice (for such in my opinion it is) as small as I can. He seems to have great tact, a very necessary thing in his position. These last few days have passed like a dream to me, and I am so much bewildered by it all that I know hardly how to write, but I do feel very happy. It is absolutely necessary that this determination of mine should be known to no one but yourself and to Uncle Ernest until after the meeting of Parliament, as it would be considered otherwise neglectful on my part not to have assembled Parliament at once to inform them of it.

"Lord Melbourne, whom I have, of course, consulted about the whole affair, quite approves my choice, and expresses great satisfaction at this event, which he thinks in every way highly desirable.

"Lord Melbourne has acted in this business, as he has always done towards me, with the greatest kindness and affection. We also think it better, and Albert quite approves of it, that we should be married very soon after Parliament meets, about the beginning of February.

"Pray, dearest Uncle, forward these two letters to Uncle Ernest, to whom I beg you will enjoin strict secrecy, and explain these details, which I have not time to do, and to faithful Stockmar. I think you might tell Louise of it, but none of her family.

"I wish to keep the dear young gentleman here till the end of next month. Ernest's sincere pleasure gives me great delight. He does so adore dearest Albert.

"Ever, dearest uncle, your devoted niece,
"V. R."

The Prince himself at this time appears moved by conflicting feelings. He was not less happy than the Queen in the affection of his future consort, but his joy is tinged with some anxiety.

In a letter to his mother he writes that "with the exception of his relations to the Queen, his future position will have its dark side;" but he consoles himself with the same reflexion as he had suggested to the Queen at her accession. Life, he says, "has its thorns in every position, and the consciousness of having used one's powers and endeavours for an object so great as that of promoting the good of so many will surely be sufficient to support me." He is conscious that he must throw all his energies into the land of his adoption, and separate himself in a great degree from his native country; but he assures one of his correspondents that he will not forget his old home, and that it is his intention to be "a true German and a true Coburg and Gotha man." In a word, he betrays a sense of responsibility most unusual in his age and position, and very noble impulses. Perhaps a frank letter to his friend Prince Lowenstein gives us the best view of his mingled feelings:—

"Yes—I am now actually a bridegroom! and about the 4th of February hope to see myself united to her I love!

"You know how matters stood when I last saw you here. After that the sky was darkened more and more. The Queen declared to my uncle of Belgium that she wished the affair to be considered as broken off, and that for four years she could think of no marriage. I went therefore with the quiet but firm resolution to declare, on my part, that I also tired of the delay, withdrew entirely from the affair. It was not, however, thus ordained by Providence; for on the second day after our arrival the most friendly demonstrations were directed towards me, and two days later I was secretly called to a private audience, in which the Queen offered me her hand and heart. The strictest secrecy was required. Ernest alone knew of it, and it was only at our departure that I could communicate my engagement to my mother.

"I think I shall be very happy, for Victoria possesses all the qualities which make a home happy, and seems to be attached to me with her whole heart.

"My future lot is high and brilliant, but also plentifully strewed with thorns. Struggles will not be wanting, and the month of March already appears to have storms in store.

"The separation from my native country—from dear Coburg—from so many friends, is very painful to me! When shall I see you again, dear Lowenstein?

"Pray show no one this letter. I write you these details relying upon your silence, for I know your friendship for me. Now good-by, and think sometimes of your "ALBERT."

We may conclude, however, that his hopes for overpowered his anxiety. On his return to Coburg he met his uncle Leopold at Wiesbaden, who in a letter to the Queen, describes him as "full of fun and gaiety." By the people of this country, the marriage, when announced to them, was welcomed with enthusiastic delight. Perhaps, as Lord Melbourne said to the Queen, what gave them the greatest satisfaction was the knowledge the marriage was one of affection, and not a mere State arrangement. But, in addition to this, they were extremely glad to be delivered from the prospect of a reunion with Hanover; and the King of Hanover, who after the demise of the Queen was the next heir to the throne, was very unpopular. Lastly, in Gotha and Coburg, we hear that there were sad lamentations over the prospect of the loss of the Prince, but this, too, must have been abundantly balanced by their delight at his good fortune; and the Prince in a letter to the Queen describes how, on the day of the public declaration of the marriage, "they went on firing in the streets with pistols and guns during the whole night, so that you would have imagined that a battle was taking place."

Meanwhile the arrangements preliminary to the marriage were being conducted in England. The engagement was not made public until the Prince left England, which was on the 24th of November. On the following day the Queen wrote to the various members of the Royal family, and received kind answers from all of them. It was decided that the public announcement should be made in the first instance to the Privy Council, and the Queen returned for that purpose to Buckingham Palace on the 20th of November, where Lord Melbourne met her with a draught of the statement she was to make. The declaration was made on the 23rd of November, in the presence of 83 Privy Councillors, and it suggests sad reflections that no less than 61 of these are already dead. The Queen herself gives an interesting account of this brief scene:—

"Precisely at 2" (the Queen records in her journal) "I went in. The room was full, but I hardly knew who was there. Lord Melbourne I saw looking kindly at me with tears in his eyes, but he was not near me. I then read my short declaration. I felt my hands shook, but I did not make one mistake. I felt most happy and thankful when it was over. Lord Lansdowne then rose, and, in the name of the Privy Council, asked that 'this most gracious and most welcome communication might be printed.' I then left the room, the whole thing not lasting above two or three minutes. The Duke of Cambridge came into the small library where I was standing and wished me joy."

The Queen always wore a bracelet with the Prince's picture, and "it seemed," she adds in her journal, "to give me courage at the Council."

The Queen was now married to the husband of her choice amid the sincere and general rejoicing of her subjects; the Prince, on the other hand, was established in his new and difficult position. The first point of any delicacy he had to arrange related to the formation of his household. His own ideas are given in a letter to the Queen before his marriage, which furnishes another striking proof of his good sense:—

He thus writes to the Queen on the 10th of December, 1839:—

"Now I come to a second point, which you touch upon in your letter, and which I have also much at heart. I mean the choice of the persons who are to belong to my household. The maxim, 'Tell me whom he associates with, and I will tell you who he is,' must here especially not be lost sight of. I should wish particularly that the selection should be made without regard to politics; for if I am really to keep myself free from all parties, my people must not belong exclusively to one side. Above all, these appointments should not be be mere 'party rewards,' but they should possess other recommendations besides those of party. Let them be either of very high rank, or very rich, or very clever, or persons who have performed important services for England. It is very necessary that they should be chosen from both sides—the same number of Whigs as of Tories; and above all do I wish that they should be well-educated men and of high character, who, as I have already said, shall have already distinguished themselves in their several positions, whether it be in the army, or navy, or in the scientific world. I know you will agree in my views."

On the whole, his household was formed to his satisfaction upon these principles. The selection of his private secretary seems to have been the only point on which he was seriously disappointed, for Mr. Anson, who was chosen for the post, had been private secretary to Lord Melbourne. But the independent and straightforward character of this gentleman soon removed the Prince's dissatisfaction, and he regarded him at length as one of his most valued friends. The same rule was established as was observed in the household of the Queen herself, that those appointments only should be permanent which were held by men entirely unconnected with politics, while those filled by Peers or members of the House of Commons should change with the various changes of Ministry. Nothing could be more admirable than the principles on which he guided his relations towards general society. He was well aware of the misconception to which he might be exposed, and "he therefore," we read:—

"From the first, laid down strict, not to say severe rules, for his own guidance. He imposed a degree of retraint and self-denial upon his own movements, which could not but have been irksome, had he not been sustained by a sense of the advantage which the Throne would derive from it. He denied himself the pleasure—which to one so fond as he was of personally watching and inspecting every improvement that was in progress would have been very great—of walking at will about the town. Wherever he went, whether in a carriage or on horseback, he was accompanied by his equerry. He paid no visits in general society. His visits were to the studio of the artist, to museums of art or science, to institutions for good and benevolent purposes. Wherever a visit from him, or his presence, could tend to advance the real good of the people, there his horse might be seen waiting; never at the door of mere fashion. Scandal itself could take no liberty with his name. He loved to ride though all the districts of London where building and improvements were in progress, more especially when they were such as would conduce to the health or recreation of the working classes; and few, if any, knew so well, or took such interest as he did, in all that was being done, at any distance east, west, or south of the great city—from Victoria Park to Battersea—from the Regent's Park to the Crystal Palace, and far beyond. 'He would frequently return,' the Queen says, 'to luncheon at a great pace, and would always come through the Queen's dressing-room, where she generally was at that time, with that bright, loving smile with which he ever greeted her; telling her where he had been, what new buildings he had seen, what studies, &c., he had visited. Riding for mere riding's sake he disliked, and said, 'Es ennuyirt mich so.' (It bores me so.)

"There were some, undoubtedly, who would gladly have seen his conduct the reverse of all this, with whom he would have been more popular had he shared habitually and indiscriminately in the gaieties of the fashionable world—had he been a regular attendant at the racecourse;—had he, in short, imitated the free lives, and even, it must be said, the vices of former generations of the Royal Family. But the country generally knew how to estimate and admire the beauty of domestic life, beyond reproach, or the possibility of reproach, of which the Queen and he set so noble an example. It is this which has been the glory and the strength of the Throne in our day, and which has won for the English Court the love and veneration of the British people, and the respect of the world. Above all, he has set an example for his children, from which they may be sure they can never deviate without falling in public estimation, and running the risk of undoing the work which he has been so instrumental in accomplishing."

His position in the Queen's own household presented not the least of the difficulties which he had to surmount. In a letter to Prince Loewenstein he says, "In my home life I am very happy and contented, but the difficulty in filling my place with the proper dignity is that I am only the husband, not the master, in the house." But the following interesting passage tells us how this delicate point was settled:—

"Fortunately, however, for the country and still more fortunately for the happiness of the Royal couple themselves, things did not long remain in this condition. Thanks to the firmness, but at the same time gentleness with which the Prince insisted on filling his proper position as head of the family—thanks also to the clear judgment and right feeling of the Queen, as well as to her singularly honest and straightforward nature—but thanks, more than all, to the mutual love and perfect confidence which bound the Queen and Prince to each other, it was impossible to keep up any separation or difference of interests or duties between them. To those who would urge upon the Queen that, as Sovereign, she must be the head of the house and the family as well as of the State, and that her husband was, after all, but one of her subjects, Her Majesty would reply, that she had solemnly engaged at the altar to 'obey' as well as to 'love and honour,' and this sacred obligation she could consent neither to limit nor refine away."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

ABYSSINIAN CAPTIVES RELEASED.

A telegram from London, of the 4th September, received by the Ganga, announces the release of the Abyssinian captives.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Friday Evening.

There has not been much done to-day in the Opium market in the shape of either sales or purchases. A limited amount of business only has been done in Patna at $637½ on short credit to the Chinese, foreigners being quite out of the market, and speculation almost at a complete standstill. Very little will be doing until fresh advices are received from Calcutta by the French Mail now due, and the future course of the market will entirely depend upon the supply that will come on from the Ninth Sale. Should it prove to be 3,400 or 3,500 chests for this place, present rates can hardly be maintained. Benares is nominally quoted at $632½, there being no stock left. Malwa remains much the same, new $725 to $730, and old $740 to $742½ to the Chinese. Closing quotations are—Patna $636¼ to $637½, Benares $630 to $633½, 9th Sales Patna $635 to $637½, Malwa $725 to $742½.

The day of the departure of the mail is usually an exceedingly dull day in commercial circles, and this has been no exception to the rule. There have been one or two inquires for Imported Goods, and some sales are reported, but beyond this there has been nothing doing. Sales include 1000 pieces Grey Shirtings at $3.35, 20 bales 28.32 Cotton Yarn at $180, and 260 bales Bombay Cotton at $19.25. There has been rather more doing in Produce among the natives, the movement to-day embracing 600 piculs Yellow Beans at $2.06, 1,115 piculs Siam Pepper at $6.32 to $6.35, 20 bales Fungus at $33.00, 100 Dried Mussels at $6.50, and 15 bales Shellfish at $42.00. The Share market has been very quiet. Bank and Steamboat are in good demand, the former at ½ and 1½ per cent. discount for Old and New respectively, and the latter at 19 per cent. discount. Over three hundred of these have changed hands within the last ten days. There are buyers of Hotel Shares at 75 per cent. discount, and sellers of Union Dock at 30 per cent. discount. The French Mail is now over due, and should make her appearance to-day.

We have received the following letter on the subject of some remarks made on Thursday, in these columns:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIR,—Your commercial article of this morning contains some remarks of which we think we have just cause to complain. We are the "unprincipled parties" who have been guilty of the "despicable and underhand" proceeding of getting out cotton yarn at $144 per bale on commission. We freely confess that "the feeling and object for which" we have done this is the "despicable" one of making money, and if the inspirer of your paragraph will enlighten us as to his object in getting out cotton yarn it will doubtless be found to be of the same "despicable" nature. To excite as much prejudice as possible, it is insinuated that we make misrepresentations to the Chinese buyers, and that the bills drawn against the goods are hypothecated. We deny both insinuations, and think it scarcely becomes an honorable man to make them without proof. We suspect that his knowledge of business is limited, having been all picked up in China, otherwise he ought to have known that a system of business similar to that which he denounces is largely carried on with India, although hitherto it has not been introduced into China.

Further, we are threatened with the loss of the respect and consideration of straitforward merchants. Under these circumstances, we should apply to him to learn how to bear the infliction, as he receives but scant measure of either at the hands of his fellow colonists. We are happy, however, to believe that the paragraph has had the opposite effect from that intended, and that we are not likely to be damaged by it. We are, yours faithfully,

R. MCGREGOR & Co.

LEA AND PERRINS' celebrated WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE declared by connoisseurs to be the only good Sauce.

Caution against Fraud. The success of this most delicious and unrivalled Condiment having caused certain dealers to apply the name of "Worcestershire Sauce" to their own inferior compounds, the Public is hereby informed that the only way to secure the genuine, is to ASK FOR LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE, and to see that their names are upon the wrapper, labels, stopper, and bottle.

Some of the foreign markets having been supplied with a spurious Worcestershire Sauce, upon the wrapper and labels of which the names of Lea and Perrins have been forged, L. and P. give notice that they have furnished their correspondents with power of attorney to take instant proceedings against Manufacturers and Vendors of such, or any other imitations by which their right may be infringed.

Ask for LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE, and see Name on Wrapper, Label, Bottle, and Stopper.

FRENCH MEDICINES,

PREPARED BY

GRIMAULT AND Co.,

Chemists to H. I. H. Prince Napoleon,

Paris.

These different medicines represent the most recent medical discoveries, founded on the principles of Chemistry and therapeutics. They must not be confounded with secret or quack medicines, as their names sufficiently indicate their composition; a circumstance which has caused them to be appreciated and prescribed by the faculty in the whole world. They widely differ from those numerous medicines advertised in the public papers as able to cure every possible disease, as they are applicable only to but a very few complaints. The most stringent laws exist in France, with regard to the sale of medical preparations, and only those which have undergone an examination by the Academy of Medicine, and have been proved efficacious, either in the Hospitals or in the practice of the first medical men, are authorised by the Government. This fact must be a guarantee for the excellency of Messrs. GRIMAULT ET CIE.'s medicines.

DOCTOR LERAS'

(Doctor of Medicine)

LIQUID PHOSPHATE OF IRON.

The newest and most esteemed medicine in cases of: Chlorosis, pains in the stomach, difficult digestion, dismenorrhea, anæmea, general debility, and poorness of blood.

It is particularly recommended to regulate the functions of nature, and to all ladies of delicate constitution, as well as to persons suffering under every kind of debility whatsoever. It is the preservative of health par excellence, in all warm and relaxing climates.

No more Cod-Liver Oil.

GRIMAULT'S SYRUP OF IODIZED HORSE-RADISH.

This medicine has been administered with the utmost success in the Hospitals of Paris. It is a perfect substitute for COD LIVER OIL, and has been found most beneficial in diseases of the chest, scrofula, lymphatic disorders, green sickness, muscular atony, and loss of appetite. It regenerates the constitution in purifying the blood, it being the most powerful depurative known. It has also been applied with happy results in diseases of the skin. Further, it will be found to be of great benefit to young children subject to humours and obstruction of the glands.

Consumption Cured!

GRIMAULT'S SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITE OF LIME.

This new medicine is considered to be a sovereign remedy in cases of consumption and other diseases of the lungs. It promptly removes all the most serious symptoms. The cough is relieved, night perspirations cease, and the patient is rapidly restored to health.

N.B.—Be sure to see that the signature of GRIMAULT & Co. is affixed to the bottle, as this syrup is liable to imitations.

No more Difficult or Painful Digestion.

DR. BURIN DU BUISSON'S

(Laureate of the Paris Imperial Academy of Medicine)

Digestive Lozenges.

This delicious preparation is always prescribed by the most reputed medical men in France, in cases of derangements of the digestive functions, such as:

GASTRITIS, GASTRALGIA; long and laborious digestion, wind in the stomach and bowels, emaciation, jaundice, and complaints of the liver and loins.

No more Dyspepsia, vomiting during pregnancy, or sea sickness.

GRIMAULT'S ELIXIR OF PEPSINE.

Pepsine undergoes no alteration in this delicious preparation. It will consequently be preferred to PEPSINE POWDERS or Pills. It is the digestive medicine par excellence, and is at the same time a most agreeable table liqueur.

Messrs. Grimault beg to call the attention of the faculty and of the public in general to the fact that real pepsine is prepared in France alone. It is far superior to all others often extracted from the stomach of porci.

No more Copaiba and Cubebs.

GRIMAULT'S CAPSULES AND LIQUID EXTRACT OF MATICO VEGETALIS.

Where all other Medicines have failed, these preparations will always effect a cure. These insure rapid and extraordinary cure of severe, recent, and chronic cases of private disease. They are used in the Hospitals of Paris, by the celebrated Dr. RICORD, and are found greatly superior to all hitherto known mineral remedies and Copaiba and Cubebs. The injection is used in recent, and capsules in the more chronic cases.

N.B.—All the above medical preparations are accompanied by instructions as to the manner in which they are to be taken.
